GRIHA Linked Incentives

Benefits of GRIHA

GRIHA, along with the activities and processes that lead up to it, benefit the community at large with improvement in the environment by reducing greenhouse gas emissions, reducing energy consumption, and the stress on natural resources.

Some of the benefits of a green design to a building owner, user, and the society as a whole are:

- Reduced energy consumption without compromising the comfort levels, hence financially beneficial.
- Reduced water consumption.
- Reduced destruction of natural areas, habitats, and bio-diversity, and reduced soil loss from soil erosion.
- Reducing waste generation with direct health benefits.
- Increased user productivity.
- Enhance image and marketability.
- Facilitates compliance with various states and policy requirements.
